While looking for a way to easily check VSWR before getting on HF, Mark Persons, W0MH, designed a relay that allows convenient antenna checking and tuner adjustments without putting noticeable power on the air to cause interference. His four-port RF switch handles the radio, a dummy load, the antenna, and an antenna analyzer. You can add this flexibility to your station too — get the construction details in Mark's article, "An Easy Way to Use a Relay to Switch RF in an HF Station." [Mark Persons, W0MH, photos]
